Courses

Innovations in Governance. Executive Education, Harvard Kennedy School). Addressed to senior public leaders, this program explores new methods of working across traditional jurisdictions and sectors to identify, understand, and address emerging social problems.
Topics include strategic management, political innovation, adaptive leadership, and principled negotiation.

API-601 (Harvard Kennedy School): Responsibilities of Public Action Required course for all incoming Masters of Public Policy candidates. The course examines (1) contemporary theories of justice to ask how governments and public policies should be shaped and (2) the contending obligations and values that should guide the decisions of citizens and officials.

PAL-218 (Harvard Kennedy School): Putting the Public Back Into Public Policy: Strategies of Civic Engagement and Effective Governance

Explored several instances of large and medium scale democratic reform in public and private sector organizations. Cases included health care reform in Oregon, municipal budgeting in Porto Alegre, Brazil, participatory school governance in Chicago and Kentucky, and community policing.

PAL-183 (Harvard Kennedy School, jointly listed with MIT): Politics, Justice, and Social Change.

Co-Instructors: Dara O'Rourke, Noam Chomsky

Introductory course explores dimensions of inequality and injustice in contemporary contexts that include U.S. foreign policy, the distribution of wealth and income, racial politics, and the environment. Also analyzes why democratic polities accept such extensive injustice, and concludes by presenting three strategies of response: social movements, institutional reform, and electoral politics.

Social Capital, Urban Politics, and the Law (Harvard Law School 1L Reading Seminar)

Co-Instructor: David Barron

This course examines the theory of social capital, made famous by Robert Putnam's best-selling book, Bowling Alone, in the context of the cities and suburbs that comprise the metropolitan areas in which most Americans lives. The course examines the relationship between theories of social capital and major topics in metropolitan studies, including homeowners associations, New Urbanism, community development corporations, racial segregation and metropolitan government. A major theme of the course concerns the relationship between theories of social capital and legal interventions, and thus materials will include not only theoretical writings but also relevant judicial opinions.

PAL-217 (Harvard Kennedy School): Citizen Participation for the 21st Century, What's Working?

This class explores theories and practices of citizen participation ranging from voting, interest group participation, secondary associations as well as institutions that invite the direct participation of citizens in the exercise of state power.

Justice (Spring 1996, 1993, MIT), Assistant to Professor Joshua Cohen

Undergraduate core class which covers three major theories of justice: the utilitarianism of Bentham and of Mill, libertarianism of Nozick, Hayek, and Friedman, Rawls' egalitarian liberalism, and the communitarianism of Walzer and Taylor. Responsibilities included teaching a section and grading the papers and final exam.

Classics of Political Philosophy (Fall 1993, MIT), Assistant to Professor Uday Mehta

Undergraduate course which closely covered the major works of Hobbes, Locke, and Rousseau.

Modern Social Theory (Spring 1992, MIT), Assistant to Professor Uday Mehta
Course included both graduates and undergraduates. Analyzed works of Durkheim, Marx, and Weber.
